

Rise and Shine: Football and Alcohol Culture at Indiana University Bloomington

Reflections from the Team

Annie Delehanty (she/her)

Annie loved her weekly group meetings with her GAP team, she looked forward to working together, and gathering information on party culture here at IU. After 6 years at IUB it was great to learn more about the students all around her! The power of research allows us understand the impact that we can have on campus, how everything is connected and help students feel empowered and like they belong!

Ian Fournie (he/him)

Ian had a great GAP experience this semester. He loved his group meetings every week, working on their research while watching Monday Night Football and eating snacks. This semester has helped Ian learn how to do proper research and how findings can help better the lives of others.

Jared Hunt (he/him)

In GAP this semester, I have enjoyed spending time in the K-11 apartment with Sunny and watching a variety of primetime football matches. I have also enjoyed getting the opportunity to work with a wonderful team of researchers who have consistently been willing to work and compromise with each other. The research that we have taken part in has shown me the importance of the student perspective on the constructed environments at Indiana University. It was really meaningful for me to come to a better understanding of IU as it has held a special place in my life for the previous six years.

Kirsten Stenger (she/her)

Kirsten has really enjoyed her experience in GAP this semester, especially because of her GAP group, Annie, Ian, and Jared. She had a great time getting to create their project, doing research, and getting to know each member better thorough the process. Kirsten thinks that research and assessment in higher education is important because it can power the future and show areas for changes and improvements.
